Choose to thrive than to live your life in misery©. Life is too short.

Try to thrive or Perish

*Are you addicted to being miserable?
If so, take your time today, to reflect on what you want or like, and think about what you can do about it.*

It is evident that, as a person, you do not live your life in isolation. You share this world with all kinds of people. It is undeniable that, all this people have and live different lifestyles around you. This is because people like different things, and everyone is born unique, and is bound to think differently. We have different aspirations in life, so, it is impossible for anyone to precisely plan their future or their likes and don'ts, based on another person's future, or their likes and don'ts. You wouldn't know that, unless, they tell you. For those who have come of age and reached the stage of realization, there are some people who never sit and reflect on the following questions: What do they like in their lives? How important it is for them to get that thing they like? What can they do, to get what they like? And if they find it difficult to get it, what assistance do they need to get what they like? Sometimes people who do not ask themselves the abovementioned questions, find it very difficult to pinpoint and know exactly, what they want in their lives and what to strive to live for. In some instances, other people who know what they like in their lives, and device means to get what they want or like, life circumstances tend to favor them than the others. The other people, who do not or want to or do not care about what they like, starts to see and feel like they have what we call "bad luck" or "they are unlucky" or being punished by some force and eventually thrive on the addiction of being miserable. Then, they start to think that other people who seem to be thriving in life are responsible for their misery and choose to do nothing to change the situation for the better. The truth is, life is a miracle itself. It is a gift which needs to be handled with care to thrive. We are equipped with intelligence to handle and endure a lot which we feel it is not the way we want. Challenge yourself today, take your time, reflect, focus and reach out for what you want and get it for yourself. If not, ask for help in good faith, you shall receive.
